After reviewing the points in the Proposed Final Judgement ( from here on referred as pfj ) I'm afraid that I would like to go on record as opposed to the pfj. I feel that the pfj allows Microsoft a way to get around every one of the points made. Some by just renaming software, others by not giving out information in a timely manner. To top it off there seems to be no real effective way to enforce the ruling, leaving it up to the legal system. The government has spent millions on this case and should not; in my opinion, throw in the towel in the final round.
